Case No. U-12892

REPLY BRIEF OF THE DETROIT EDISON COMPANY

I.

INTRODUCTION

The Detroit Edison Company believes that the Initial Briefs of the parties to this proceeding have further limited the issues in this proceeding. All of the parties agree that The Detroit Edison Company incurred $27,225,289 of prudently incurred and reasonable implementation costs in 2000 for its Direct Access program. (Initial Brief of Staff pp.1, 3; Initial Brief of Attorney General pp. 10-11; Initial Brief of ABATE pp.1, 3; Initial Brief of The Detroit Edison Company pp. 1-7) The remaining issue appears to be whether the Commission can, and should, condition the recovery of Detroit Edison's $27,225,289 in prudent and reasonable 2000 Direct Access implementation expenditures on some undefined, future, backward-looking evaluation of the "effectiveness" of Detroit Edison's Direct Access program. The Attorney General and ABATE support such a future review, despite its obvious inequity and illegality. (Initial Brief of ABATE pp.1-3; Initial Brief of Attorney General pp. 10-11) Detroit Edison opposes such retroactive "rearview regulation" for the reasons set forth below.

II.

The Future Review of 2000 Direct Access Implementation Costs for Purposes of Permitting Future Disallowances is Inequitable and Contrary to Commission Policy

Making recovery of prudently incurred implementation costs conditional on some amorphous standard of Direct Access “effectiveness” is inequitable. Clearly, there are many factors outside of the control of Detroit Edison that might cause Direct Access to be less attractive to electric customers and therefore reduce participation in the program. Among the possible reasons for lower-than-anticipated Direct Access participation could be (a) high market costs for power, (b) customer apathy, (c) levels of customer education, (d) poor supplier marketing, (e) supplier apathy, (f) market forces outside the control of Detroit Edison and the Michigan Public Service Commission, and (g) low customer savings.

The Attorney General and ABATE would expose Detroit Edison’s Direct Access expenditures to the vagaries of outside forces and some ill-defined potential dissatisfaction with the level of Direct Access participation. There is no evidence in the record that supports any conclusion other than that Detroit Edison’s 2000 Direct Access expenditures were reasonable and prudent. Detroit Edison made those expenditures in good faith, with Commission oversight and with the understanding that its prudently incurred expenses would be recovered.

Furthermore, the Commission recognized, from the nascence of electric utility restructuring, that a reasoned approach to addressing Direct Access implementation costs was essential. The Commission explained that, with respect to implementation costs:

“These are costs that would not be incurred absent a direct access program...If the costs were prudently incurred, it would...be inappropriate to disallow recovery by the utility. (MPSC Case No. U-11290, Order dated June 5, 1997 pp. 12-13)

To now impose a hindsight review of Direct Access implementation costs would clearly be inequitable, unreasonable and an abuse of discretion.

III.

The Future Review of 2000 Direct Access Implementation Costs for Purposes of Permitting Future Disallowances is Illegal

Electric utility regulation is guided by certain well-established principles. One of those well-established principles is that the prudence of decisions and expenditures are evaluated based on what was known at the time the decision to make the expenditures was made. ABATE v. Public Service Commission, 208 Mich App 248 (1994)¹

Furthermore, 2000 PA 141 (“the Act”) makes mandatory Detroit Edison’s recovery of its Direct Access implementation costs. The Act provides:

“No later than January 1, 2002, the commission shall issue orders establishing the rates, terms and conditions of service that allow all retail customers of an electric utility or provider to choose an alternative electric supplier. The orders shall provide for full recovery of a utility’s net stranded costs and implementation costs as determined by the commission.” MCL 460.10a(1)(emphasis added)

Clearly, the Commission is statutorily required by the Act to approve the recovery of Detroit Edison’s 2000 Direct Access implementation costs. In addition, the Commission’s pre-Act orders making the determination that utilities are rightfully entitled to recovery of implementation costs are also supported by the Act. (See Section II. above; MCL 460.10a(5))

Finally, it is beyond reasonable dispute that Detroit Edison has federal² and state³ constitutional rights to substantive and procedural due process, fair treatment and just and reasonable rates. Similarly, Detroit Edison has constitutional protections against “takings” and confiscatory rates. U.S. Const. Amends V, XIV; Michigan Const. Art 1, Sec. 17, Art 10 Sec. 2; Missouri ex rel Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. v. Public Service Comm. of Missouri, 262 U.S. 276; 43 S. Ct. 544; 67 L. Ed. 981 (1923), Federal Power Commission v. Natural Gas Pipeline, 315 U.S. 575; 62 S. Ct. 736; 86 L.Ed. 1037 (1942), Federal Power Commission v. Hope Natural Gas Co., 320 U.S. 591; 64 S. Ct. 281; 88 L. Ed. 333 (1944), Permian Basin Area Rate Cases, 390 U.S. 747; 88 S. Ct. 1344; 20 L. Ed. 2d 312 (1968), Duquesne Light Co. v. Barasch, 488 U.S. 299; 102 L. Ed. 2d 646; 109 S. Ct. 609 (1989) See also Northern Michigan Water Co. v. Public Service Commission, 381 Mich 340 (1968), Michigan Consolidated Gas Company v. Public Service Commission, 389 Mich 624 (1973), Consumers Power Company v. Public Service Commission 415 Mich 134 (1982), ABATE v. Public Service Commission, 430 Mich 33 (1988),

Were the Commission to accept the recommendations of ABATE and the Attorney General and further condition recovery of the $27,225,289 that Detroit Edison prudently and reasonably spent in 2000 to implement Direct Access, the Commission would clearly be acting outside its authority and unlawfully depriving the Company recovery of its prudently incurred expenses. In sum, the course of action urged by ABATE and the Attorney General is unlawful and must be rejected.

²The Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, applicable to the states through the 14th Amendment prohibits the taking of private property for public use without just compensation. The 14th Amendment also assures substantive and procedural due process.

³Article 1 Section 17 of the Michigan Constitution ensures due process, as well as fair treatment in the course of legislative and executive investigations and hearings. Article 10 Section 2 prohibits the taking of private property for public use without just compensation.

IV.

CONCLUSION AND REQUEST FOR RELIEF

All of the parties agree that $27,225,289 of the $28,269,326 spent by Detroit Edison in 2000 to implement Direct Access was reasonable and prudent. Detroit Edison accepts the lower $27,225,289 amount as its recoverable Direct Access implementation costs for 2000. There was no evidence in the record to support the approval of an amount lower than $27,225,289. Conditioning the recovery of that amount on some hindsight evaluation of the success of Direct Access would be inequitable and illegal. Thus, Detroit Edison respectfully requests that the Commission unconditionally approve $27,225,289 as its 2000 Direct Access implementation costs and approve recovery of that amount through the residual savings associated with the issuance of Detroit Edison's securitization bonds, as further described and recommended in MPSC Case No. U-12639, or in some other unconditioned, reasonable, equitable and lawful manner.

Respectfully submitted:
